

Outreach Caller Playbook

A simple guide for calling solar installation business owners across India

Goal: Book the meeting. Nothing else.

Welcome: Read This First

This playbook is for every new outreach caller on our team. It tells you exactly what to say, in what order, and, just as important, why we say it that way. Read the 'why' boxes carefully. Understanding the reason behind the script will help you handle situations that aren't written down here.

You can speak in Hindi or any other language

The scripts in this playbook are written in English so everyone on the team can follow the same structure. But on the actual call, speak in Hindi, or whichever language the business owner is most comfortable in. Many owners will relax and open up faster if you speak to them in their own language. Follow the same flow and the same intent, just say it naturally, in your own words, in the language that works best for that call.

WHY THIS MATTERS

Business owners trust people who sound like them, not people who sound like they're reading a script. A natural conversation in their preferred language builds trust faster than perfect English ever will.

The One Rule Above All Others

You are not a telecaller selling a service. You are a Regional Growth Researcher helping local solar entrepreneurs discover proven ways to get more commercial project enquiries, without running ads or managing social media pages themselves.

Your only job on this call is to book a meeting or a callback. The moment you start explaining services, pricing, websites, or tools, the owner mentally files you as "just another vendor" and stops listening. Leave the selling to our senior consultant on the actual meeting.

WHY WE NEVER SELL ON THE CALL

1. A cold call is too short and too rushed to explain a business properly. Anything you say will sound generic.
2. The moment a prospect hears "packages" or "pricing," they compare you to every other agency that has called them, and you lose the differentiation.
3. Curiosity gets appointments booked. Full information gets the call ended. Your job is to open the door, not walk through it.

Mindset Before You Dial

Understand the market you're calling into

The solar installation business in India is booming right now. Owners are genuinely busy, usually on a site visit, in front of a client, or managing installation teams. They are not sitting by the phone waiting for your call. Respect that from the first second.

Respect their success

These are people who have already built a working business. Never speak to them like they need saving. Position the conversation as scaling up what's already working, not fixing what's broken.

Create a gentle sense of urgency, not panic

Most solar businesses grow purely on word-of-mouth. That works, up to a point. Gently remind them that while they're busy on-site, competitors may be picking up bigger commercial and industrial projects. This isn't about scaring them, it's about opening their eyes to a gap they may not have noticed.

Always reassure: no ads, no social media

Many owners have already wasted money on ads or agencies that promised social media growth with no results. Always make it clear early: this is not that. This reassurance alone will keep many owners on the call longer.

WHY WE LEAD WITH REASSURANCE

Most business owners have been burned before by ad agencies. Saying "no ads, no social media" upfront removes their biggest objection before they even raise it, and signals that you understand their world.

Step-by-Step Call Flow

Step A: Reaching the right person

SAY THIS

"Hello, Good Morning."

"Am I speaking with the owner?"

If NO, ask to be connected, or find out when the owner is free:

SAY THIS

"May I know who looks after the business decisions?"

"No problem. What would be a good time for me to speak with them?"

If a time is given, note it down as a callback in the CRM.

Step B: Opening with the owner

SAY THIS

"Hi Sir / Ma'am, my name is _____. Did I catch you at a bad time?"

If they say it's a bad time, don't push. Just get a better time and log the callback:

IF BUSY

"No problem at all. What would be a better time for a quick two-minute call?"

WHY WE ASK PERMISSION FIRST

Asking "did I catch you at a bad time" shows respect for their schedule and lowers their guard. People are far more willing to listen once they feel they were asked, not interrupted.

Step C: The opening pitch, keep it short

SAY THIS

"Great, I'll keep it very brief. We work with solar installation companies to help them increase commercial enquiries and improve how those enquiries are managed. I just wanted to ask, is increasing commercial projects something your business is currently looking at?"

Whether they say YES or NOT SURE, move forward to the next step in the same way.

Step D: When they ask "What exactly do you do?"

This is the most important moment of the call. Use the expert hand-off, never explain the actual system.

SAY THIS

"We work exclusively with solar installation companies. Every business is different, so instead of explaining individual services over the phone, our consultant first understands your business and then explains what approach would actually be relevant for you."

"Would you be open to a short discussion to understand more?"

WHY WE DON'T EXPLAIN THE SYSTEM ON THE PHONE

"Every solar business is structured differently, so I won't explain a generic system over a quick phone call." Explaining the full system on a cold call makes it sound generic and copy-paste. It invites instant comparison with every other caller they've heard from. A brief, confident hand-off to "our senior consultant" keeps the mystery and value intact, and positions the meeting as tailored advice, not a sales pitch.

If YES, move straight to booking (Step E). If they ask you to send details instead, go to the WhatsApp / Email section on the next page.

Step E: Booking the meeting

SAY THIS

"Perfect. Would a Google Meet be convenient, or would you prefer a normal phone call?"

Once they agree, confirm all of the following before you hang up:

- Date
- Time (mention morning or afternoon convenience first)
- Google Meet OR Phone Call
- Email address
- WhatsApp number

Immediately after the call, log the meeting in the CRM and send the confirmation with meeting date and time, Google Meet link (if applicable), and the name of the consultant who will speak with them.

WHY WE CONFIRM EVERY DETAIL ON THE CALL

A meeting booked without a confirmed date, time, and contact method is very likely to be missed. Confirming all details live, while the owner is still engaged, gets far higher show-up rates than following up later by text.

Handling Objections

Objections are normal. They don't mean the owner is rejecting you. Stay calm, acknowledge what they said, and gently steer back to booking the meeting.

If they say...	You say...	Then...
"Do you build websites?"	We're not calling specifically about websites. The discussion is about increasing commercial enquiries and making the overall business process easier.	Book meeting
"Do you do social media marketing?"	No, this isn't a social media marketing call. The discussion is about helping solar installation companies grow their business.	Book meeting
"What are you selling?"	I'm not calling to sell anything over the phone. I'm only checking whether this is something you'd be interested in understanding. If it feels relevant after the discussion, we can take it further.	Book meeting
"I'm busy right now."	No problem. What would be a better time for a quick two-minute call?	Callback booked
"Call me later."	Sure, what time would be convenient?	Callback booked
"We already have a website."	That's good to hear. This discussion isn't about replacing your website. It's about increasing commercial enquiries and improving how those enquiries are managed.	Book meeting
"We already work with an agency."	That's perfectly fine, many companies we speak with already work with someone. This is simply another perspective. After the discussion, you can decide whether it's relevant.	Book meeting
"How much does it cost?"	That depends on your current business setup. Our consultant first understands your business and then recommends only what's relevant. That's why we don't discuss pricing before the consultation.	Book meeting

"Not Interested": don't give up immediately

SAY THIS

"I completely understand. Before I let you go, may I ask one quick question?"

If they agree, ask:

SAY THIS

"Are you completely satisfied with the number of commercial enquiries your business receives today?"

If NO:

SAY THIS

"That's exactly why I thought it might be worth having a discussion. There's absolutely no obligation. It's simply a 30-minute consultation to understand your business and see whether our approach could be relevant. Would a phone call or Google Meet be easier?"

If YES, thank them and end the call politely. Do not push further.

POLITE CLOSE

"That's great to hear. Thank you for your time. Have a wonderful day."

WHY WE ASK ONE MORE QUESTION BEFORE HANGING UP

"Not interested" is often a reflex, not a real decision. Many owners haven't actually thought about whether they're happy with their current enquiry flow. One honest, low-pressure question can reopen the conversation without sounding pushy. But if they confirm they're genuinely satisfied, always let them go gracefully. A respectful close keeps the door open for the future.

WhatsApp and Email Templates

Some owners will ask you to send information instead of booking a meeting on the spot. That's fine, but always follow the same rule: send the company profile only. No pricing, no packages, no brochure. Then book a specific callback time to get their feedback.

WHY WE ONLY SEND THE COMPANY PROFILE

Sending pricing or a full package list by text removes the reason for the owner to ever get on a call with our consultant. They'll just compare numbers with other vendors and go quiet. The company profile builds credibility without giving away the details that need a real conversation.

If they say "WhatsApp me"

SAY ON THE CALL

"Certainly, I'll WhatsApp you our company profile so you can know a little about us. Once you've had a chance to look at it, I'll give you a quick call to get your feedback and, if you feel it's relevant, we can schedule a 30-minute discussion with our consultant."

"Would around 5:30 PM today be okay, or would tomorrow morning be better for my follow-up call?"

Then send this message on WhatsApp:

WHATSAPP MESSAGE: SEND WITH THE COMPANY PROFILE ATTACHED

"Hi [Owner Name],

Thank you for your time on the call. As discussed, sharing our company profile here.

We work with solar installation companies to help increase commercial project enquiries, without running paid ads or managing social media.

Please have a look whenever convenient. I'll call you at [agreed time] to hear your thoughts and answer any questions.

Thanks,

[Your Name]

[Company Name]"

If they say "Email me"

SAY ON THE CALL

"Certainly, I'll email our company profile. Once you've had a chance to go through it, I'll give you a quick call to get your feedback and, if you feel it's relevant, we can schedule a discussion with our consultant."

"What would be a better time for my follow-up call?"

Then send this email:

Subject: Company Profile for Solar Businesses: Grow Your Commercial Enquiries

Dear [Owner Name],

Thank you for taking the time to speak with me today.

As discussed, please find our company profile attached. We work with solar installation companies to help increase commercial project enquiries, using proven methods, without paid ads or social media management.

I will call you on [agreed date/time] to hear your feedback and answer any questions you may have.

Looking forward to speaking with you.

Warm regards,
[Your Name]
[Company Name]
[Phone Number]

In both cases, always log the callback time in the CRM immediately. A follow-up that isn't scheduled usually doesn't happen.

Quick Reference: Golden Rules

- You are a Regional Growth Researcher, not a salesperson. Your only job is to book the meeting or callback.
- Never explain services, pricing, or the system on the call. Always hand off to the consultant.
- Always reassure: no paid ads, no social media management.
- Speak in Hindi or any language the owner is comfortable in. The script is a guide, not a word-for-word script.
- If they want details sent, share the company profile only, never pricing or packages.
- Every call ends with either a booked meeting or a booked callback. Log it in the CRM before moving to the next call.
- Stay respectful and brief. Busy owners respond to callers who value their time.
